

Kristen Torres Pawling has over a decade of experience in the sustainability field, largely in the public and non-profit sectors. Kristen is the Sustainability Program Director at Los Angeles County Chief Sustainability Office, where she co-led the effort to author the nation's most ambitious regional sustainability plan. Previously, she advocated on climate and urban planning issues at the Natural Resources Defense Council and served in the Chair's Office at the California Air Resources Board. She is an appointee to the inaugural California Climate Insurance Working Group and the Culver City General Plan Advisory Committee. Kristen earned a Bachelor of Art degree in geography/environmental studies and a Master of Urban and Regional Planning degree from UCLA.